Welcome addition to anybody's summer c a m p would be Veronica Carlson, but the bare facts show she's probably more at home in a brickyard than a uniform.

'LET'S STAY ON TOP, STEALEY SAYS

BUSY CAMP STACKS UP

Members of the 937th were busy during June UTA making preparations for their annual summer encampment scheduled August 9-23.

Plans were being made and such things as pay record readied for what Lt. Col. William E. Stealey, commander, said would be a busy two weeks for the airmen.

Events scheduled for the camp include a military ball August 5 at Top of the Mall, Shepherd Mall, with the Air Force Reserve Band from Robins Air Force Base, Ga., playing and a family day including a parade, picnic and open house complete with prizes for the kids.

Overall objective, Stealey said, is training. "We want to upgrade all our people tho require it -- our support people, such as supply, aircraft mechanics and so on."

The 937th, one of the nation's largest air reserve units, recently switched to a newer rodel of the huge C-124 alobemaster, and Stealey pointed out that maintenance crews will get intensive training in caring for the craft.

"Just wearing a uniform doesn't make a man combat ready," Stealey said. "There's always room for improvement. But, quite frankly, I feel we've got the best C-124 unit in the nation and we want to keep it that way."

Stealey said the 937th's present combat capability "is second to none. Our people are all volunteers — they enjoy their jobs—and we work hard and play hard, and that's the way to stayon top."

STATE ROA PICKS 937TH OFFICERS

Lt. Col. William E. Stealey, commander of the 937th, chats during the ROA meeting with Gen. Mike Massad (Ret.), deputy assistant secretary of defense for reserve affairs who recently resigned his post.

Three 937th "brass" wearers received special recognition during the annual meeting of the Oklahoma Department of the Reserve Officers Association April 11-13.

Officers representing Oklahoma's reserve and national guard units heard briefings on military matters concerning them and their units during the conference held at Tinker Air Force Base.

Receiving the 1969 Minuteman of the Year Award from the Oklahoma Department was Capt. Paul Nelson, commander of the 937th's Aero Medical Evacuation team.

He was cited as the one person in Oklahoma who has done the most for the ROA.

Maj. David J. "Bud" Sutton, 937th aircraft maintenance officer , was elected vice president for air force of the state organization.

1Lt J. Stephen Hope, 937th Information Officer, was elected junior vice president for air force. Highlighting the session was a banquet address by Maj. Gen. Mike Massad (Ret.) deputy assistant secretary of defense for reserve affairs.

Gen. Massad told the officers that disproportionate publicity of reservists' protesting their call-up in 1968 has hurt the reserve image.

"I'm sure," the general continued, " that many Americans got an erroneous and dim view of the reserve program, for hardly anything was said or done about the great majority --97 percent of the reservists -- who went about the business of serving their country litary way. "I found it very interesting to note that some of the reserve units with members who made the most fuss are reported as outstanding in action in Vietnam," he said.

in the traditional mi-

"Even the great majority of the three percent I spoke about, once they got over their complaints, have taken their places in line and have done a good job.

"We can enthusiastically say that the reserve units that were mobilized in 1968 again proved the true worth of our reserve program," he added.

Gen. Massad was appointed to his current position in May, 1968, by President Johnson and received senate confirmation in June. He is the first civilian to occupy the position.

High ranking dignitaries representing each branch of the military spoke before the entire delegation.

How Do You Figure This?

You can start forgetting your service number and start rememebering your Social Security number.

Effective July 1, the Social Security Account Number (SSAN) will become airmen's service identification number.

Wing Headquarters reminds airmen to verify the accuracy of the SSAN as it appears on the Monthly Earnings Statement, AF Form 1965.

Summed up, headquarters' warning means, "If your SSAN number is wrong, your payments will be messed up."

It takes more than a good appearance and a pretty smile to win promotions. Otherwise, we figure 23-year-old AmTravis undoubtedly would already be a full general instead of a chorus girl-actress.

2 Sergeants Trade Stripes, Pin on Bars

Two completely new military wardrobes were called for when two 937th senior master sergeants jumped to the rank of captain.

John R. "Dick"
Brooke and Clifford
A. Cole both wo n captain's bars under an annual Air Force Reserve program which allows outstanding airmen to receive direct commissions.

The new officers were sworn in following April UTA by Capt. Larry G. Bunch, personnel officer.

Capt. Bunch explained that this reserve program allows 200 reservists across the nation to annually apply for a direct commission.

Brooke and Cole were the only two to apply from the local unit.

Both of the new officers work in civilian jobs at Tinker.

Brooke is a placement specialist in civilian personnel, and Cole is chief of the travel section for the comptroller's office.

Capt. Bunch said the two men were selected on the basis of service, participation and contribution to the Air Force Reserves.

He added that men n commissioned under this program can receive a rank from second lieutenant to captain. The rank is determined by experience and age.

Capt. Bunch pointed to this program as one of many which offers opportunities to prior service personnel interested in serving with the reserves.
